AIMU Student Code of Professionalism

STUDENT CODE OF PROFESSIONALISM

AIMU expects all students to develop and maintain the highest standards of conduct and ethics in all aspects of their medical education. This code of professionalism explicitly identifies and describes the values and principles of AIMU that are critical for students to graduate as doctors and to serve the patients competently and compassionately with honor. AIMU code of professionalism highlights the importance of being both responsible and accountable, and seeks to articulate an impartial and just approach to alleged failures to uphold virtue of honesty and respect.

AIMU values and principles:

As a medical student at AIMU I will uphold the following:

Respect the dignity and beliefs of every individual.

Regardless of race, ethnicity, national origin, age, gender, socioeconomic background, sexual orientation, religious belief or political affiliation, I will strive to respect my teachers, fellow students, patients, and other members of the medical school community.

Place the interests and needs of sick and disadvantaged above my own interests.

Be compassionate toward others.

I realize it is important for developing physicians to share in the experience of suffering of the unwell patients in their physical, emotional and social aspects.

Be collaborative and collegial

I believe working in a team as a practicing physician is critical for the management of patients. I should develop and constantly improve the skills required for the integration and coordination of talents, knowledge and skills of my colleagues, teachers and other health professionals during clinical postings.

Be responsible and accountable

I commit myself to responsibility and accountability for my own learning through identification of gaps in knowledge, skills and attitudes. Through this I seek to improve these both within and beyond the learning environment.

Be worthy of the trust

of my patients, teachers, and fellow students.

Be honest

I will be speaking and acting with truth

Adhere to the policies and procedures of AIMU.

I make these promises freely, fairly and upon my honor
